SUNDAY SERVICES IN THE OLIVER VEVIVAL

The rain came just as the crowd was assembling at the tabernacle yesterday for the morning service. On account of this the congregation repaired to the Baptist church. The house was well filled and a most delightful service was had.

Mr. Oliver's subject was "The Shadow Life." "By shadow, I mean influence," said Mr. Oliver. He asked the Christians how their shadows were affecting the sinners about them. He urged the Christian to live a life that would be an influence for good to the ungodly. Your influence will meet you on the day of judgment. "What will business men think when they meet young men on the day of judgment who have been influenced by their acts? I would that your shadow stood for personal piety. All men have influence. Time is going to prove that a life spent in sin is not only a squandered life, but one spent in open rebellion against God."

He urged that Christians be more consistent in their lives. He deplored that the average attendance at prayer meetings was a disgrace to church people. "You have let lodges and clubs come between you and your duty to God. The closer to God you get, the less you need these."

Mr. Oliver dwelt at length on power of thought over life. "Thought not only affects your life, but those about you. The science of telepathy is no longer a theory. If a man lives in a low atmosphere, his thoughts become low and vile." He said there was great power in unity of thought, whether for good or evil. "Thoughts will condemn or commend our souls to the God above."

The Afternoon Service.

A great crowd heard Bro. Oliver at the afternoon meeting for men. His subject was the story of the prodigal son, and the opinion is unanimous that this lecture was one of the most beneficial and elevating ever heard in the city. He demanded that fathers and sons be as chaste and moral as the wives and daughters. He said that the man who was reveling in drink, spending nights in gambling halls and damning his soul and body in adulterous living was doing nothing more than feeding swine. He urged that it was high time for men to quit serving the devil and to respond to a pleading and becoming God, who has a salvation that will save the vilest sinner.

Evening Service.

"They Shall Never See Light." This was the subject on which Rev. Oliver based his masterful sermon

Sunday evening.

"The text means that men are doomed to eternal despair." Mr. Oliver said that the unpardonable sin was in entering into a compact with the devil against God; the deliberate rebellion against God. He said: "Some of you are hearing the word the last time. Some of you are hiding behind a refuge of sin and serving the devil." He said men were selling their souls—some for money, some for political patronage, others for satisfaction of the lust of the body. "The light shows a man up. A criminal hates the light. Some men won't come to these services because they can't face the light of the truth. Light on the conduct of the insurance companies sent one of the presidents to his grave. Light in the face of the guilty condemns. Many men shun the truth. They refuse to study the word, and rebel against its teachings."

Mr. Oliver attacked the idea that living up to lodge vows would save a man. "There is not a lodge on earth that will justify man on the judgment day." He gave testimony of a Master Mason who declared that there is nothing in Masonry that would justify a man before God. "It will not take the place of the blood of Jesus Christ."

Bro. Oliver said we hear of heathens in China and other foreign lands, but we also have them in our very midst. "There are men who put the dollar above their God; there are women who let dress and society damn their souls." He said thousands worship pleasure instead of God.

Mr. Oliver paid a most eloquent tribute to love. He said the word was all the sweeter because of its long and interesting history. He asked who would condemn the word and its meaning because of its antiquity. "No one. Yet some say I preach an old theology. I want no better recommendation. I love it because it is old. It has stood the test of centuries." He said time is the best critic; that he believed in and loved a theology that has thrived since time began.

Mr. Oliver closed his sermon in an earnest appeal to the ungodly to face about and not rebel longer against the spirit of God. He told them that it was not the lack of knowledge that would send them to hell. "I have warned you; will you listen?"

300 IMMIGRANTS PERISH IN WRECK OF STEAMER

Cartagena, Spain, Aug. 6.—A terrible marine disaster occurred Saturday evening off Cape Palos. The Italian steamship Sirio, from Genoa for Barcelona, Cadiz, Montevideo and Buenos Ayres, with about 300 persons on board, was wrecked off Hormigas Island.

Three hundred emigrants, most of them Italians and Spaniards, were drowned.

The captain of the steamer committed suicide.

The Bishop of San Pedro, Brazil, also was lost, and it is said that another bishop is among the missing.

The remainder of the passengers and officers and crew got away in the ship's boats, or were rescued by means of boats sent to them from the shore.

A number of fishermen, who made attempts at rescue, were drowned. Those rescued from the vessel are now at Cape Palos in a pitiable condition, being without food or clothing.

The Sirio struck a rocky reef known as Bajost Hormigas, and sank soon after. Hormigas Island lies about two and a half miles to the eastward of Cape Palos.

The Sirio was owned by the Navigazione Italiana, of Genoa. Before he committed suicide the captain declared the steamer had 645 passengers on board, and that her crew numbered 127 men. The Sirio had 570 passengers when leaving Genoa, but additional Spanish passengers were taken on board at Barcelona, where the vessel touched a few hours before the disaster.

OKLAHOMA'S ANTI-TRUST LAW IS A STRINGENT ONE

Guthrie, Okla., Aug. 6.—The announcement from the governor's office that the attorney general has been instructed to "investigate to see if any railroads have violated their charters" has been accepted by the McGuire-Frantz papers with a whoop and a hurrah in an attempt to show what is going to be done by their leaders, in fighting the combines and especially the railroads.

The announcement that Governor Frank Frantz will have Attorney General Cromwell investigate violations of Oklahoma laws by railroads reveals a fact not even well known in Oklahoma, that the territory's anti compact law is one of the most stringent on any state statute in the United States, and that if enforced, it would wipe out every combine of any nature in the Indian Territory.

It took effect on December 25, 1890, and its provisions are so stringent that several legislatures, sitting since that time, have acknowledged that it is a better law and more stringent than any proposed since that time. The legislature of 1903 had under discussion what was believed to be a very strict anti-trust law, but all attempts to pass it were defeated. The law of 1890 was unearthed and read by one of the members. It proved to be far more stringent than the one under discussion.

The only question as to this law applying to the railroads, is whether or not freight rates constitute a commodity. If they do constitute a commodity, then a railway company may be punished under its provisions on the matter of freight rates, pooling and other matters of discrimination. The 1890 law provides penalty for combining to restrict competition in business, holds companies liable for violations by their officers, provides that money paid by innocent parties to companies violating the law may be recovered, and places the responsibility upon county attorneys to prosecute violations. The penalty for the first violation is a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $600, and for the second offence a fine of double the amounts for the first offence and also the forfeiture of its corporate rights.

ARRESTED FOR PRIESTER KILLING

Three Negroes Arrested for Murdering the Priester Boy.

Tulsa, I. T., Aug. 6.—Philip Howe, Joe Murray and Jim Jackson, young negroes, were arrested here Saturday afternoon for the murder of little Harry Priester, which occurred in West Tulsa several weeks ago.

The murder of Harry Priester, who was but 8 years of age, was one of the most brutal crimes ever recorded in the territory. He was lured from his home to a remote spot in the West Tulsa Frisco yards and killed, after which his body was mutilated almost beyond recognition and then thrown into a car of wheat in transit to Houston, Texas, to conceal the crime. The murder came to light four days after in Francis, I. T., while the car was lying in the Frisco yards.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

OPERATING AND RECEPTION ROOMS OF DRS. BROWALL & FAUST

Salaries of State Officials.

During this session of congress, as in many previous sessions, the expediency has been considered of raising the salaries of the higher officers of the national government and of the diplomatic and consular service. It is coming more and more to be recognized as a fact, says Youth's Companion, that the richest nation in the world, occupying a country in which the highest business salaries in the world are cheerfully paid, is nevertheless a niggardly paymaster of its highest officers. For a large share, indeed for most, of the minor positions in the government service the payment is adequate. The earnings of the clerks in Washington and of most of the men on the civil service lists compare favorably with those of men doing similar work for private employes. But for the president, vice president, members of the cabinet and of the supreme court, the circuit court judges, ambassadors and ministers, and many of the higher officers at Washington and in the states the compensation is not only inadequate to the demands of the places they occupy, but is notoriously less than men of equal ability receive in private life. The word "compensation" is used advisedly, for it includes not only the salary which goes with these offices, but the honor which attaches to them. Both together are still inadequate payment. The desire to preserve that "republican simplicity" which has always been an American ideal is the main obstacle to the raising of official salaries. Many persons fail to consider that for one who can afford it, liberal expenditure is not necessarily a sign either of extravagance or of luxury; and that with nations, as with individuals, the scale which is just and proper in the day of small things may be a measure of unseemly parsimony when the circumstances have changed.

One Theory of Wealth.

Why there should be hard-working poor men and idle rich men in the same community is a question which no one has answered, and no one can answer satisfactorily. That is why the opinion is so prevalent that the world, economically considered, is so very much out of joint, believes T. N. Carter, a writer in Atlantic. But although there is so much unanimity in the opinion that wealth ought not to be distributed as it now is, there is still a wide diversity of opinion, where there is any definite opinion at all, as to how it really ought to be distributed. These opinions may, however, be reduced to three fundamentally distinct theories, which I shall call the aristocratic, the socialistic, and the democratic, or liberalistic, theories. The aristocratic theory is that the good things of the world belong more particularly to certain groups or classes than to others, by virtue of some circumstance connected with their birth or heredity, and independently of their individual achievements. The socialistic theory is that wealth ought to be distributed according to needs, or according to some similar plan arranged beforehand, and independently of the individual ability to acquire wealth in the rough-and-ready struggle of life. The democratic, or liberalistic, theory is that wealth ought to be distributed according to productivity, usefulness, or worth.

Latest Table Delicacy.

"Hothouse lamb" is beginning to appear on the menus at many of the first-class hotels. A quarter of hot house lamb can now be bought, if one is willing to pay four or five dollars for it. But up to a week or so ago the butchers refused to divide the carcasses, finding ready market for all they could get at from $25 to $30 apiece. As such a lamb seldom weighs more than 25 pounds, including pelt and head, it makes the meat come pretty high. "Hothouse lamb is an answer to a demand for a new kind of edible animal," said a butcher, "but its invention was almost an accident. A farmer out in Kansas conceived the idea that an animal could be pushed in its growth the same as a plant or flower, so he took ten ewes and put them in the cellar of a stable, keeping the place at a uniformly high temperature. When the lambs were born he increased the heat and fed them all they could possibly eat. The lambs developed rapidly and were ready for market six weeks ahead of those born and reared under ordinary conditions."

William Sherring, the young Canadian who won the Marathon race at Athens, gives the credit to his mother, who, he says, supervised his training. She decided what he should eat, and would not cook anything else. When she was told that he had won, she remarked, "Of course, I knew he would. That is what I sent him over for." This is a very pretty sentiment, remarks Youth's Companion, but leaves one in doubt as to what the other young men's mothers said when told that they had not won.

DESCRIBE YOUR WIFE

The Average Man Can't Tell Her Weight, Features, Etc.

"Say, Mr. Married Man," said a Coates house hotel clerk to an acquaintance, "I'll make a little bet with you. You've been a victim of matrimony for five years, but I'll wager a good cigar that you can't, off hand, tell your wife's height, weight and the color of her eyes and hair. Quick now—without stopping to think—is it a go?"

"Sure," replied the married man, "I'll smoke on you."

"All right go ahead with the description. But be careful—I am acquainted with her. What does she weigh?"

"A hundred and thirty-three. That's easy—we both got weighed a few days ago."

"Very good. What's the color of her hair?"

"Why black; that is, pretty near black—a sort of brownish black, with a kind of a red-tinge."

"Get out that doesn't go. Reddish-blackish-brown doesn't mean anything. How tall is she?"

"Well, the top of her head comes to my chin, and I am five feet eleven

Missions in the Orient

Protestant missionaries among the Filipinos report favorable progress in religious instruction among the natives, and this is confirmed by the recent annual report of the work of the American Bible society in those islands. It sets forth that the commercial, social and religious life of the people there is receiving new and powerful influences from the missionary work and Bible distribution going on, the last year having been the most prosperous in these respects since our occupation there began.

THE DOUMA'S ADVICE

Chicago Tribune Touches on Conditions in Disturbed Russia

It may have been impolitic or "a gross blunder" for the British prime minister to say "The douma is dead! Long live the douma!" It may displease the Russian government, but there is no reason why it should. One douma is dead by the act of the czar. At the same moment that he dissolved the one he gave orders for the election of another. Russia is not to be deprived of the vestige of parliamentary institutions it has had for a few months. Naturally that is gratifying to all who wish well to Russia, and hope that Russians will finally have a constitutional government.

It is to be feared that before they do much blood will flow. St. Petersburg is quiet for the moment, for the streets swarm with soldiers, but there are riots in other cities, and the terrorists are proclaiming more death sentences. The czar is among the doomed. The douma has not died without uttering a protest and an appeal. It does not go so far as to refuse to submit to dissolution. It does not say that it is the government and ask the people to rally to its support.

MORRILL HALL, A. & M. COLLEGE, STILLWATER

The graduates of this institution are meeting with remarkable success. As scientists, engineers, lawyers, physicians, bankers, managers of large agricultural enterprises, business men, etc., they are achieving success which should give pride to every citizen of Oklahoma.

The A. & M. College can no longer be called a small institution. It enrolled last year over five hundred regular students, and counting the short course students, over nine hundred. It has a faculty of thirty members, a building equipment of $300,000 and a teaching equipment of $150,000. Regular collegiate courses, leading to the degree of bachelor of science, are offered as follows:

1. General Science Course. This is a general collegiate course, with the opportunity to specialize in a given science—chemistry, biology, or botany.
2. Engineering Course. A strong and up-to-date course in mechanical, electrical or civil engineering.
3. Agricultural Course, including agronomy, animal husbandry, horticulture, and dairying.
4. Science and Literary Course. This is a new course arranged with the purpose of giving a general collegiate education, and as a suitable preparation for taking up the professional study of law, journalism, medicine, etc.

For young women it affords an admirable course in domestic economy, preparing them for teaching in that line.

CHANCE MADE HIM

Professor Milne, the Famous Seismologist, Owes to it Success

Had it not been for chance Professor Milne, the famous seismologist, might never have taken up the study of earthquakes at all. He was 20 years of age when Cyrus W. Field, the founder of the Atlantic Cable company, sent to the Royal School of Mines, London, for a young man to go out to Japan. The present professor was the man selected. "When can you start?" on Tuesday?" asked Field. The student responded that the time was too short to get his things together, as it was then Friday. "Look here, young man," said Field, "it only took six days to make the world, and if a whole world can be made in that time your few things can be got together in less. Leave a note with my secretary as you go out as to what salary you want." On the Tuesday the young man was on his way to Japan.

THE LAZY WORM

Large District in Middle of Porto Rico Afflicted With it

A large district in the middle of Porto Rico, with a population of 100,000, is afflicted with the "lazy worm," and official efforts are being made to improve the inhabitants' condition. A hospital has been established at Albonito, with an endowment of $15,000, and will do what it can to check the ravages of this minute reptile, of the existence of which the old time native of Porto Rican never had the slightest notion. Last year an American medical officer, Captain Ashford, treated 4,500 cases, and nearly all of them were cured. As a result, the population is aroused to much enthusiasm, and the afflicted are applying in great numbers for treatment. Heretofore the malady has been deemed incurable.

Indian Territory towns have lost sight of politics in their aspirations to become county seats. Their delegations are consuming much of the time of the district committee.

The Girl From the Circus.

BY L. A. HARKER.

The scholar sat in his study before his writing table, but he did not write. He leant his elbow on the table and his head on his hand, and he was thinking of Phyllis far away in the mountains with her husband. The table was piled with books—several stood open invitingly—and a fair white sheet of paper lay on his blotting-pad—but he did not write.

Presently the maid opened the door and said:

"There's a young woman, sir, asking to see you; shall I say you're engaged?"

"A young woman?" queried the scholar. "What sort of a young woman?"

"Well, sir," and the maid closed the door behind her. "She says she's from the circus tent that's pitched on the lot behind the school house."

"From the circus?" repeated the scholar. "What can she want?"

"She won't give her name or message, sir. Shall I say that you're engaged, sir?"

The maid considered it the "height of impudence" that a hussy from the circus should dare to ask to see her master. Fine doings, indeed, for such as she to be asking for gentlemen, as bold as brass!

The scholar pondered, then he said, half to himself, "Phyllis would like me to see her—she was always kind. You can show her in."

The maid departed, and presently ushered a young woman into the room and shut the door after her carefully.

The young woman advanced into the middle of the room and then stood still awkwardly, and said nothing. She was a tall, slight girl, attired in a variety of garments, startling in hue, and having apparently no connection with one another. Her hair was crowned by a hat of portentous size, adorned by several rather dejected-looking feathers. But under the furze-bush of hair the face was oval and almost beautiful in its regularity of features and pure color.

The scholar rose and bowed, then with old-world courtesy he set a chair for her, and having seen her seated, murmured something shyly as "to what he was indebted for the pleasure of this visit?"

The girl stared at him with wide blue eyes, then said abruptly: "I say, you're a knowin' old cove, aren't you?"

The scholar stared a little at this description of himself, and waved his hands deprecatingly. The girl went on: "I've heard in the town as you are always a-studyin' old books, and knows all sorts of heathenish lingo; now do you know how to make a love poshin'?"

The scholar gazed at her in speechless astonishment, then he grasped the edge of his writing table for support and stammered:

"Do I understand you to ask me if I know anything about love philtres?"

"Yes, that's the ticket," said the girl, genially. "I want a love poshin to give my young man. He's been and took up with Mad'selle Leonore, what does the trials of strength, and I want to bring him back to me. I was sure as you'd know."

The scholar felt quite sorry for her when he realized the disappointment he was about to inflict, she smiled so prettily and looked so pleasant. He shook his head, then he said gently:

"I'm afraid I am quite unable to help you in this matter. I know nothing of such things, neither do I believe that they can have the smallest effect."

"But I thought you was always a-studyin' ancient days," said the girl, in an argumentative voice, leaning forward in her chair. "Do think—in some of those old books" (waving her hand in the direction of the book-lined walls). "Ain't there something in some of them old books?"

"I fear not," said the scholar almost sadly, she was so eager, so much in earnest. The girl drew herself up in her chair and said abruptly: "I'm a honest girl, I am."

"That I am sure you are, and therefore you need no love philtres. Believe me, you're quite pretty and good enough to inspire love, an honest love, without resource to magic." The scholar spoke persuasively, his voice was very gentle and his manner courtly. The girl winked her wide blue eyes, and made a little swallowing motion with her throat, then she coughed and continued: "My father's brought us up strict. He don't allow swearing for women; and if we was light he'd lay the horse whip about our shoulders, he would. He's clown in our show, he is."

There was silence for a minute in the big library, then the scholar said gently: "Why do you want a love philtre? Is the man you are engaged to fickle?"

"Well, he runs after Mad'selle Leonore, and I can't stand it, and he laughs at me, and I'm miserable, I am."

The girl's voice broke, and great tears rolled down her cheeks. She wiped her eyes with a gayly-bordered pocket handkerchief and said: "What would a lady do?"

The scholar pondered for a moment then said, diffidently, and with extreme shyness:

"I think that she would not—show that she minded. That she would try to be always sweet-tempered and gracious, above all to Madam what's-her-name. Don't let him think himself so precious, my child; we all value what is hard to obtain. He's too sure of you, or he wouldn't tease you. If you are wise, and if he is worth having—if he's worthy of you and of your good father, you'll find that all this nonsense will come to an end as a tale that is told."

It was a long speech for the scholar to make; he flushed a little as he made it, and the circus girl gazed at him admiringly, exclaiming, "You are a knowin' old cove!"

The scholar shook his head and said humbly, "I fear I am ignorant in these matters. I have only known three women intimately in my life—my mother, my wife and my daughter."

"Is that what your daughter did?" she asked, eagerly.

"I don't know what she did," answered the scholar gently; and indeed it was true, for the engagement had come to him as a bolt from the blue while he was thinking of Phyllis as still in pinafores.

"Was she very hard to please?" persisted the girl.

"Had Phyllis been hard to please?" the scholar asked himself. He did not know. It had not taken long to please her, anyhow; so he said, "I don't know if she was hard to please, but I know that whatever she did was right and womanly, and you can do all that yourself, my dear."

"I wish I was a lady!" sighed the circus girl, "but father says one can be as good a girl in a troupe as if one was a scripture reader. What do you say?"

"I quite agree with your father; he must be a most sensible man, and I wish I knew him. Believe me, a circus lady can be just as good and useful a lady as any other if she will only try, and I am sure you'll try."

The girl rose from her seat, so did the scholar; she held out her hand and he took it, and the old man and the girl looked into each other's eyes.

"Good-by," said the girl; "I'm glad I come, though you are so ignorant about love poshins!"

"I'm very glad you came," said the scholar heartily; "and, believe me, you need no 'love poshins,' you are quite charming enough without." The girl flushed up to the roots of the furze-bush.

Then the scholar said: "Would you like some roses?" The girl said "Please sir," in the shyest, smallest voice, and the scholar held the door open for her to pass out. Then he followed her across the hall and through the open front door. He took his pruning knife from his pocket and he cut her a great bunch of roses that were famed throughout the county, then he walked down the drive with her, and at the gate he bade her good-by.

She started down the road, and then, looking back and seeing him still standing at the gate, she ran back, saying breathlessly, "I wish you'd come and see me ride. I can jump through the hoops beautiful, I can! I should like to show you."

The scholar's eyes were very kind, but he shook his head, saying: "I'm getting an old man, my dear; I hardly ever go out at night."

"But there's a matinee—an afternoon show," she explained, "this afternoon."

The scholar wavered, then the beseeching blue eyes caught his and held them. "Phyllis would like me to," he murmured; then "I will come and see you ride this afternoon."

"I shall look out for you, mind," said the girl; "don't you forget!"

The scholar did not forget—he went! (Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Joked With the Bureau

Second Expense Account of Special Examiner Showed He Had a Sense of Humor.

Ex-Commissioner of Pensions Ware told an amusing story of the expense accounts of a special examiner of the bureau, in the American Spectator. The first account, when examined at the end of the month, was found to contain the item: "Porter, 50 cents." The auditing office promptly notified the examiner that the government did not pay for the malt refreshments of its servants; whereupon the examiner patiently explained that the 50 cents had been given to the porter on a train for helping with his baggage. He was then informed that the item would be allowed, but that in future in similar cases he would use the form "porterage."

When the account for the following month was received the auditor was astonished to find a charge of two dollars for "cabbage."

"He must be running a boarding house or a rabbit farm," was the of ficer's comment.

It was only after another exchange of letters that it developed that it had been for local transportation, and not for vegetables, that the expenditure had been made.

HIS ONE WEAK SPOT.

Prominent Minnesota Merchant Cured to Stay Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.

O. C. Hayden, of O. C. Hayden & Co., dry goods merchants, of Albert Lea, Minn., says: "I was so lame that I could hardly walk. There was an unaccountable weakness of the back, and constant pain and aching. I could find no rest and was very uncomfortable at night. As my health was good in every other way, I could not understand this trouble. It was just as if all the strength had gone from my back. After suffering for some time I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The remedy acted at once upon the kidneys, and when normal action was restored, the trouble with my back disappeared. I have not had any return of it."

Railway Tariff Simplified.

Germany has just revised its railway tariff, which involves a multiplication of tickets. It is calculated that a traveler with a small family going from Mulhouse to Bale will find himself furnished with 60 tickets, in addition to which are those for baggage.

It Does It.

The remedy that cured your mother and your father of chills twenty years ago is sure good enough to cure you and your kids at the present time. Cheatham's Chill Tonic did it and will still do it. It's guaranteed.

THE CAMERA FIEND.

Man Was Not Satisfied with Ordinary Amusement Like Taking Pictures.

A well-known criminal lawyer one day sauntered into a police court just as a case was called. It appeared that the defendant had no attorney, and the judge glanced about the room to see whom he might assign to the case.

"I'll take it, judge," the late comer said, wishing to pass away the time.

"By the way, what is the man charged with?" the attorney presently asked.

"He's a camera fiend of the worst sort, Mr. Brown," the judge said with a slight smile. "I expect to send him to the workhouse for about three months."

"What!" the lawyer shouted, indignantly. "Your honor must be joking. Send a man to the rock pile for three months for a little harmless amusement like taking pictures?"

"Well," the judge said, mildly, "he don't take pictures much—it's the cameras he takes."

English Language in Antwerp. Nearly one-half of the shipping traffic to and from Antwerp is carried on under the British and American flags, and this has made Antwerp almost an English-speaking port. Free night schools for exclusive classes in English, organized by the city authorities, are attended by thousands of pupils, while special attention is paid to the study of English in all the grades of the day schools, public as well as private. This desire to popularize the English language is not confined to Belgium, but has extended to Germany as well, where schools of instruction have already been established at Munich and Nuremberg by the German government.

It isn't until a man swears off that he finds out how many fellows want to treat him.

DIDN'T BELIEVE

That Coffee Was the Real Trouble.

Some people flounder around and take everything that's recommended but finally find that coffee is the real cause of their troubles. An Oregon man says:

"For 25 years I was troubled with my stomach. I was a steady coffee drinker, but didn't suspect that as the cause. I took almost anything which someone else had been cured with but to no good. I was very bad last summer and could not work at times."

"On Dec. 2, 1902, I was taken so bad the doctor said I could not live over 24 hours at the most, and I made all preparations to die. I could hardly eat anything, everything distressed me, and I was weak and sick all over. When in that condition coffee was abandoned and I was put on Postum, the change in my feelings came quickly after the drink that was poisoning me was removed."

"The pain and sickness fell away from me and I began to get well day by day, so I stuck to it until now I am well and strong again, can eat heartily, with no headache, heart trouble or the awful sickness of the old coffee days. I drink all I wish of Postum without any harm and enjoy it immensely."

"This seems like a strong story, but I would refer you to the First Nat'l Bank, the Trust Banking Company, or any merchant of Grant's Pass, Ore., in regard to my standing, and I will send a sworn statement of this if you wish. You can also use my name." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Still there are many who persistently fool themselves by saying "Coffee don't hurt me." A ten days' trial of Postum in its place will tell the truth and many times save life. "There's a reason."

ABOUT PRESSING FLOWERS

Pressed Flowers Are Pleasant Souvenirs of a Vacation—How They May Be Preserved.

No prettier or more pleasure-giving vacation spent at the seashore or in the country could be found than a specimen book filled with dried flowers, leaves and seaweeds, and the work of gathering and preparing them would amuse the most indifferent boy or girl. Then it is very simple, and costs little time and trouble.

The collector should provide himself with a tin botanical box, or, lacking this, with several dozen sheets of soft, thick, unglazed wrapping paper, and two boards for covers. The paper and the boards should be several inches larger than the book in which the specimens are to be preserved, advises the Chicago Inter Ocean.

As each specimen is gathered, place it between two sheets of the paper, being careful to make it lie in a natural position. When the collector reaches home, he should transfer the specimens to fresh sheets of paper, placing several sheets between them, and when they are thus placed, one on top of the other, they should be weighted down with anything convenient, say books, or heavy boards, or even stones.

They should remain thus weighted for from 24 to 48 hours, and should then be removed to fresh sheets of paper, and be packed and weighted down as at first, allowing them to stay so for another period of from 24 to 48 hours. The paper used in the first packing may be dried and used again.

When the specimens are taken from the second packing, they should be mounted or fastened on separate sheets of paper for preservation. There are several ways of doing this. One way is to gum down the whole flower or leaf, but a better way is to fasten it in place by putting narrow bands of paper over parts of it. By the last method it is possible, if desired, to remove the specimen to a fresh sheet of paper.

The specimens may be mounted in a scrapbook, or the separate sheets may be kept in a box of proper size; if the latter, a light weight should be kept on them. A bit of camphor in the box will preserve the specimens, but better still is it to open and examine them now and then, so that they may get air. No specimen should be put away until it is perfectly dry, or it will mold.

On each sheet containing a specimen should be written the name of the flower or leaf, with the place where it was obtained, and the date.

SIMPLE SUMMER DESSERTS

Sponge Cake Light as Air, a Good Pudding, Snow Ball Trifles, Toothsome Brown Joe Bread.

SPONGE CAKE WITH HOT WATER.—Yolks of five eggs, two cups of powdered sugar, well beaten together; next three-quarters of a cup of boiling water, two cups of flour, a pinch of salt, two heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder and flavoring to taste. Beat the whites of the eggs to a froth. The cake is best cut with a fork.

PEGGOTTY'S PUDDING.—Four ounces of flour, four ounces of suet, rind and juice of lemon, tablespoonful of treacle, one ounce of candied peel, one teaspoonful milk. Boil three and a quarter hours, sifted sugar to be strewn over before serving.

SNOW BALLS.—One cup of sugar, two eggs, four tablespoonfuls sweet milk, one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, flour sufficient to work into balls. Fry in lard, and when done dip in white of egg, then in powdered sugar until white.

BROWN JOE BREAD.—Two cups of corn meal, two cups of white flour, one cup of molasses, one cup of sour milk, one teaspoonful soda. Steam three or four hours and bake half an hour.—N. Y. World.

Chicken Salad.

Four pounds chicken will make salad for ten or 12 persons. Cut the light and dark meat into fine pieces. Use two-thirds of the chicken to one-third of celery. Mix the salad with the dressing, saving some to pour over the top before using.

Salad Dressing.—One tablespoon mustard, one tablespoon sugar, a teaspoon of salt, one cup milk, one of vinegar, three eggs. Mix sugar, salt and mustard together and add the vinegar and well beaten eggs. Pour the milk in, stirring slowly all the time. Set in a dish of cold water and cook as soft custard; add a piece of butter as large as an egg and stir in thoroughly.

A Dinner Party.

Everything should be in readiness sometime before dinner is actually announced, so that the maid can go round and see that nothing is forgotten. A thing to impress strongly on servants is the necessity for giving all plate and glass a final polish before putting it on the table, as nothing looks worse than plate or glass which is finger-marked or not perfectly cleaned. Attention to these little points is the mark of a well-trained servant and a good mistress.

A Summer Drink.

Owing to its acidity, buttermilk is of laxative property and is supposed to make general impression on the liver. It can often be taken by those unable to take fresh cow's milk and has been found valuable in the treatment of diabetes, gastric ulcer and cancer of the stomach. It is said to be one of the most digestible of milk products and is recommended to serve the double purpose of food and beverage.

DISCOURAGEMENTS OF THE SMALL DAILY.

The Sulphur Daily Post has succumbed to the vicissitudes of a small town daily, and discontinues publication with these words:

"With this issue the Daily Post is discontinued. It has been a losing game from the start, and we do not care to lose any more money in experimenting. To discontinue the daily is a shock to our pride, but it will be a comfort to our pocketbook. We will let others run all the dailies they want to in Sulphur and bid them Godspeed, and when the sign is right and the town large enough to justify the establishment of a daily the Post will be on hand with the goods. In the meantime our energies will be devoted to issuing a first-class weekly and to putting out the best job printing in the town."

The News sympathizes with the Post; they are fellow-sufferers. At times the Evening News has become discouraged and felt inclined to discontinue. But each time the publisher renews his faith in Ada and determines to plunge on. He believes a town of any size and pretensions should have and should support a daily paper; that no town can be much or do much without one. The News is now the only daily published in the Indian Territory in a town of less than 7,000 population. It purposes to keep hammering away until Ada gets into, and then beyond, the 7,000 class.

Appointed Referee.

Attorney Thomas P. Holt on Monday received from Judge J. T. Dickerson an appointment as referee in bankruptcy for the Sixteenth Recording District to succeed Judge Howard West. While such positions usually are given to Republicans, at present there is no resident non-office holding attorney among Republicans in Ada. The selection of Mr. Holt is a judicious one; he is well qualified and will fill the office with entire satisfaction. In the order the judge recites that the appointment is necessary because of the continued absence of Judge West from the city.

Announcements.

Mr. Oliver will deliver a temperance lecture Tuesday evening.

If the weather will permit, Mr. Oliver will preach to the women at 3 p. m. Tuesday. He said that he was not going to be cheated out of that talk if he had to come to Ada at some other date just for that purpose.

Services will be held at the Baptist church tonight, owing to the inclemency of the weather.

HISTORICAL CASE CLOSED.

Hawaiian Delegate Contest Finally Terminated at Ada.

The closing incident in an historical case which arose out in the Mid-Pacific under the rays of the Southern Cross occurred in Ada today. This is the story in brief. At the general election out in Hawaii in November 1904, Colonel Curtis P. Iaukea and Jonah K. Kalamanaole or "Prince Cupid," as he is generally called, were opposing candidates for the election to the office of delegate to Congress. Colonel Iaukea who had held many offices of honor and prominence under the Hawaiian Monarchy before the overthrow, was the Democratic candidate. The Prince, who was a member of the royal family and might have been king if the Monarchy had not been overthrown, was the Republican candidate. The Prince was declared elected and given the certificate. The Democrats felt that they had been swindled out of the election and decided to initiate a contest.

Judge C. A. Galbraith, who then lived at Honolulu, was retained to conduct the case on behalf of the defeated Democratic candidate. Voluminous testimony was taken at Honolulu and at various other points on the Islands and forwarded to the Clerk of the House of Representatives at Washington. The case was tried before the Election Committee No. 3 of the House last January. Although the Committee declared some five thousand of the ballots counted for the Prince to be illegal, still they held that the Prince was entitled to the office. As is customary in election contest cases the committee allowed $2,000.00 to each of the candidates to apply on the expenses of the contest.

These items were provided for in the deficiency act approved June 30, 1906. A warrant on the United States Treasury for the sum of $2,000.00 was received by Judge Galbraith today.

While relating this story to the "News" man the Judge's face was aglow with a smile of satisfaction—assure indication that the wounds of defeat had received a balm of Gilead.

Census Returns.

Below the News publishes the enumeration of the population of 22 townships of the Sixteenth Recording district, as returned by the enumerators appointed for the purpose of dividing the territory into delegate districts for the constitutional convention. It will be observed that the full fourteen townships assigned to the Democrats have been reported, while only eight of those assigned to the Republicans have been. Mr. Ed. Breans, representing the Republican contingent of the census committee, stated to a News reporter this afternoon that he had not received returns from any townships for which his end of the committee is responsible other than those spoken of Saturday:

SUNDAY SERVICES IN THE OLIVER VEVIVAL

The rain came just as the crowd was assembling at the tabernacle yesterday for the morning service. On account of this the congregation repaired to the Baptist church. The house was well filled and a most delightful service was had.

Mr. Oliver's subject was "The Shadow Life." "By shadow, I mean influence," said Mr. Oliver. He asked the Christians how their shadows were affecting the sinners about them. He urged the Christian to live a life that would be an influence for good to the ungodly. Your influence will meet you on the day of judgment. "What will business men think when they meet young men on the day of judgment who have been influenced by their acts? I would that your shadow stood for personal piety. All men have influence. Time is going to prove that a life spent in sin is not only a squandered life, but one spent in open rebellion against God."

He urged that Christians be more consistent in their lives. He deplored that the average attendance at prayer meetings was a disgrace to church people. "You have let lodges and clubs come between you and your duty to God. The closer to God you get, the less you need these."

Mr. Oliver dwelt at length on power of thought over life. "Thought not only affects your life, but those about you. The science of telepathy is no longer a theory. If a man lives in a low atmosphere, his thoughts become low and vile." He said there was great power in unity of thought, whether for good or evil. "Thoughts will condemn or commend our souls to the God above."

The Afternoon Service.

A great crowd heard Bro. Oliver at the afternoon meeting for men. His subject was the story of the prodigal son, and the opinion is unanimous that this lecture was one of the most beneficial and elevating ever heard in the city. He demanded that fathers and sons be as chaste and moral as the wives and daughters. He said that the man who was reveling in drink, spending nights in gambling halls and damning his soul and body in adulterous living was doing nothing more than feeding swine. He urged that it was high time for men to quit serving the devil and to respond to a pleading and beckoning God, who has a salvation that will save the vilest sinner.

Evening Service.

"They Shall Never See Light." This was the subject on which Rev. Oliver based his masterful sermon.

Sunday evening.

"The text means that men are doomed to eternal despair," Mr. Oliver said that the unpardonable sin was in entering into a compact with the devil against God; the deliberate rebellion against God. He said: "Some of you are hearing the word the last time. Some of you are hiding behind a refuge of sin and serving the devil." He said men were selling their souls—some for money, some for political patronage, others for satisfaction of the lust of the body. "The light shows a man up. A criminal hates the light. Some men won't come to these services because they can't face the light of the truth. Light on the conduct of the insurance companies sent one of the presidents to his grave. Light in the face of the guilty condemns. Many men shun the truth. They refuse to study the word, and rebel against its teachings."

Mr. Oliver attacked the idea that living up to lodge vows would save a man. "There is not a lodge on earth that will justify man on the judgment day." He gave testimony of a Master Mason who declared that there is nothing in Masonry that would justify a man before God. "It will not take the place of the blood of Jesus Christ."

Bro. Oliver said we hear of heathens in China and other foreign lands, but we also have them in our very midst. "There are men who put the dollar above their God; there are women who let dress and society damn their souls." He said thousands worship pleasure instead of God.

Mr. Oliver paid a most eloquent tribute to love. He said the word was all the sweeter because of its long and interesting history. He asked who would condemn the word and its meaning because of its antiquity. "No one. Yet some say I preach an old theology. I want no better recommendation. I love it because it is old. It has stood the test of centuries." He said time is the best critic; that he believed in and loved a theology that has thrived since time began.

Mr. Oliver closed his sermon in an earnest appeal to the ungodly to face about and not rebel longer against the spirit of God. He told them that it was not the lack of knowledge that would send them to hell. "I have wanted you will you listen?"

300 IMMIGRANTS PERISH IN WRECK OF STEAMER

Cartagena, Spain, Aug. 6.—A terrible marine disaster occurred Saturday evening off Cape Palos. The Italian steamship Sirio, from Genoa for Barcelona, Cadiz, Montevideo and Buenos Ayres, with about 300 persons on board, was wrecked off Hormigas Island.

Three hundred emigrants, most of them Italians and Spaniards, were drowned.

The captain of the steamer committed suicide. The Bishop of San Pedro, Brazil, also was lost, and it is said that another bishop is among the missing.

The remainder of the passengers and officers and crew got away in the ship's boats, or were rescued by means of boats sent to them from the shore.

A number of fishermen, who made attempts at rescue, were drowned. Those rescued from the vessel are now at Cape Palos in a pitiable condition, being without food or clothing.

The Sirio struck a rocky reef known as Bajost Hormigas, and sank soon after. Hormigas Island lies about two and a half miles to the eastward of Cape Palos.

The Sirio was owned by the Navigazione Italiana, of Genoa. Before he committed suicide the captain declared the steamer had 645 passengers on board, and that her crew numbered 127 men. The Sirio had 570 passengers when leaving Genoa, but additional Spanish passengers were taken on board at Barcelona, where the vessel touched a few hours before the disaster.

OKLAHOMA'S ANTI-TRUST LAW IS A STRINGENT ONE

Guthrie, Okla., Aug. 6.—The announcement from the governor's office that the attorney general has been instructed to "investigate to see if any railroads have violated their charters" has been accepted by the McGuire-Frantz papers with a whoop and a hurrah in an attempt to show what is going to be done by their leaders in fighting the combines and especially the railroads.

The announcement that Governor Frank Frantz will have Attorney General Cromwell investigate violations of Oklahoma laws by railroads reveals a fact not even well known in Oklahoma, that the territory's anti compact law is one of the most stringent on any state statute in the United States, and that if enforced, it would wipe out every combine of any nature in the Indian Territory.

It took effect on December 25, 1890, and its provisions are so stringent that several legislatures, sitting since that time, have acknowledged that it is a better law and more stringent than any proposed since that time. The legislature of 1903 had under discussion what was believed to be a very strict anti-trust law, but all attempts to pass it died when the law of 1890 was unearthed and read by one of the members. It proved to be far more stringent than the one under discussion.

The only question as to this law applying to the railroads, is whether or not freight rates constitute a commodity. If they do constitute a commodity, then a railway company may be punished under its provisions on the matter of freight rates, pooling and other matters of discrimination. The 1890 law provides penalty for combining to restrict competition in business, holds companies liable for violations by their officers, provides that money paid by innocent parties to companies violating the law may be recovered, and places the responsibility upon county attorneys to prosecute violations. The penalty for the first violation is a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $600, and for the second offence a fine of double the amounts for the first offence and also the forfeiture of its corporate rights.

ARRESTED FOR PRIESTER KILLING

Three Negroes Arrested for Murdering the Priest.

Tulsa, I. T., Aug. 6.—Philip Howe, Joe Murray and Jim Jackson, young negroes, were arrested here Saturday afternoon for the murder of little Harry Priester, which occurred in West Tulsa several weeks ago.

The murder of Harry Priester, who was but 8 years of age, was one of the most brutal crimes ever recorded in the territory. He was lured from his home to a remote spot in the West Tulsa Frisco yards and killed, after which his body was mutilated almost beyond recognition and then thrown into a car of wheat in transit to Houston, Texas, to conceal the crime. The murder came to light four days after in Francis, I. T., while the car was lying in the Frisco yards.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the controller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts goes out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

Salaries of State Officials.

During this session of congress, as in many previous sessions, the expediency has been considered of raising the salaries of the higher officers of the national government and of the diplomatic and consular service. It is coming more and more to be recognized as a fact, says Youth's Companion, that the richest nation in the world are cheerfully paid, is nevertheless a miserably poor one in the highest business salaries in the world. The earnings of the clerks in Washington and of most of the men on the civil service lists compare favorably with those of men doing similar work for private employers. But for the president, vice president, members of the cabinet and of the supreme court, the circuit court judges, ambassadors and ministers, and many of the higher officers at Washington and in the states the compensation is not only inadequate to the demands of the places they occupy, but is notoriously less than men of equal ability receive in private life. The word "compensation" is used advisedly, for it includes not only the salary which goes with these offices, but the honor which attaches to them. Both together are still inadequate payment. The desire to preserve that "republican simplicity" which has always been an American ideal is the main obstacle to the raising of official salaries. Many persons fail to consider that for one who can afford it, liberal expenditure is not necessarily a sign either of extravagance or of luxury; and that with nations, as with individuals, the scale which is just and proper in the day of small things may be a measure of unseemly parsimony when the circumstances have changed.

One Theory of Wealth.

Why there should be hard-working poor men and idle rich men in the same community is a question which no one has answered, and no one can answer satisfactorily. That is why the question is so prevalent that the world, economically considered, is so very much out of joint, believes T. N. Carter, a writer in Atlantic. But although there is so much unanimity in the opinion that wealth ought not to be distributed as it now is, there is still a wide diversity of opinion, where there is any definite opinion at all, as to how it really ought to be distributed. These opinions may, however, be reduced to three fundamentally distinct theories, which I shall call the aristocratic, the socialistic, and the democratic, or liberalistic, theories. The aristocratic theory is that the good things of the world belong more particularly to certain groups or classes than to others, by virtue of some circumstance connected with their birth or heredity, and independently of their individual achievements. The socialistic theory is that wealth ought to be distributed according to needs, or according to some similar plan arranged beforehand, and independently of the individual ability to acquire wealth in the rough-and-ready struggle of life. The democratic, or liberalistic, theory is that wealth ought to be distributed according to productivity, usefulness, or worth.

Latest Table Delicacy.

"Hothouse lamb" is beginning to appear on the menus at many of the first-class hotels. A quarter of hothouse lamb can now be bought, if one is willing to pay four or five dollars for it. But up to a week or so ago the butchers refused to divide the carcasses, finding ready market for all they could get at from $25 to $30 apiece. As such a lamb seldom weighs more than 25 pounds, including pelts and head, it makes the meat come pretty high. "Hothouse lamb is an answer to a demand for a new kind of edible animal," said a butcher, "but its invention was almost an accident. A farmer out in Kansas conceived the idea that an animal could be pushed in its growth the same as a plant or flower, so he took ten ewes and put them in the cellar of a stable, keeping the place at a uniformly high temperature. When the lambs were born he increased the heat and fed them all they could possibly eat. The lambs developed rapidly and were ready for market six weeks ahead of those born and reared under ordinary conditions."

William Sherrington, the young Canadian who won the Marathon race at Athens, gives the credit to his mother, who, he says, supervised his training. She decided what he should eat, and would not cook anything else. When she was told that he had won, she remarked, "Of course. I knew he would. That is what I sent him over for." This is a very pretty sentiment, remarks Youth's Companion, but leaves one in doubt as to what the other young men's mothers said when told that they had not won.

The Average Man Can't Tell Her Weight, Features, Etc.

You've been a victim of matrimony for five years, but I'll wager a good cigar that you can't, off hand, tell your wife's height, weight and the color of her eyes and hair. Quick now—without stopping to think—is it a go?"

"Sure," replied the married man, "I'll smoke on you."

"All right go ahead with the description. But be careful—I am acquainted with her. What does she weigh?"

"A hundred and thirty-three. That's easy—we both got weighed a few days ago."

"Very good. What's the color of her hair?"

"Why black; that is, pretty near black—a sort of brownish black, with a kind of a reddish tinge."

"Get out that doesn't go. Reddish-blackish-brown doesn't mean anything. How tall is she?"

"Well, the top of her head comes to my chin, and I am five feet eleven

Missions in the Orient

Protestant missionaries among the Filipinos report favorable progress in religious instruction among the natives, and this is confirmed by the recent annual report of the work of the American Bible society in those islands. It sets forth that the commercial, social and religious life of the people there is receiving new and powerful influences from the missionary work and Bible distribution going on, the last year having been the most prosperous in those respects since our occupation there began.

THE DOUMA'S ADVICE

Chicago Tribune Touches on Conditions in Disturbed Russia

It may have been impolitic or "a gross blunder" for the British prime minister to say "The douma is dead! Long live the douma!" It may dispense the Russian government, but there is no reason why it should. One douma is dead by the act of the czar. At the same moment that he dissolved the one he gave orders for the election of another. Russia is not to be deprived of the vestige of parliamentary institutions it has had for a few months. Naturally that is gratifying to all who wish well to Russia, and hope that Russians will finally have a constitutional government.

It is to be feared that before they do much blood will flow. St. Petersburg is quiet for the moment, for the streets swarm with soldiers, but there are riots in other cities, and the terrorists are proclaiming more death sentences. The czar is among the doomed. It does not go so far as to refuse to submit to dissolution. It does not say that it is the government and ask the people to rally to its support.

MORRILL HALL, A. & M. COLLEGE, STILLWATER

The graduates of this institution are meeting with remarkable success. As scientists, engineers, lawyers, physicians, bankers, managers of large enterprises, etc., they are achieving success which should give pride to every citizen of Oklahoma.

The A. & M. College can no longer be called a small institution. It enrolled last year over two hundred regular students, and counting the short course students, over nine hundred. It has a faculty of thirty members, a building equipped with $250,000 and a teaching equipment of $100,000. Regular collegiate courses, leading to the degree of bachelor of science, are offered as follows:

1. General Science Course. This is a general collegiate course, with the opportunity to specialize in a given science—biology, botany, chemistry, geology, history, literature, mathematics, physics, etc. A strong and up-to-date course in mechanical, electrical or civil engineering.

2. Agriculture Course. Including agronomy, animal husbandry, horticulture, and dairying.

3. Science and Literature Course. This is a new course arranged with the purpose of giving a general collegiate education and a suitable preparation for taking up the professional study of law, medicine, etc. For young women it affords an admirable course in domestic economy, preparing them for teaching in that line.

Besides these regular collegiate courses there is a two years' course of twenty weeks each, beginning October 15, in agriculture, mechanics and the common branch of a ten weeks' course for farmers, beginning January 8, and a business course, running through the year.

Graduates of the common schools or of the eighth grade are admitted to the sub-freshman class, without examination; students completing the fourth grade are admitted to the freshman class, and graduates of approved high schools are admitted to the sophomore class.

The full term opens on September 11. Write to the President or Registrar, Stillwater, Oklahoma, for a catalogue.

CHANCE MADE HIM

Professor Milne, the Famous Seismologist, Owes to it Success

Had it not been for chance Professor Milne the famous seismologist, might never have taken up the study of earthquakes at all. He was 20 years of age when Cyrus W. Field, the founder of the Atlantic Cable company, sent to the Royal School of Mines, London, for a young man to go out to Japan. The present professor was the man selected. "When can you start?" on Tuesday," asked Field. The student responded that the time was too short to get his things together, as it was then Friday. "Look here, young man," said Field, "I only took six days to make the world, and if a whole world can be made in that time your few things can be got together in less. Leave a note with my secretary as you go out as to what salary you want." On the Tuesday the young man was on his way to Japan.

THE LAZY WORM

Large District in Middle of Porto Rico Afflicted With It

A large district in the middle of Porto Rico, with a population of 100,000, is afflicted with the "lazy worm," and official efforts are being made to improve the inhabitants' condition. A hospital has been established at Albion, with an endowment of $15,000, and will do what it can to check the ravages of this minute reptile, of the existence of which the old time natives of Porto Rico never had the slightest notion. Last year an American medical officer, Captain Ashford, treated 4,600 cases, and nearly all of them were cured. As a result, the population is aroused to much enthusiasm, and the afflicted are applying in great numbers for treatment. Hereafter the malady has been deemed incurable.

Indian Territory towns have lost sight of politics in their aspirations to become county seats. Their delegations are consuming much of the time of the district committee.

The Girl From the Circus.

BY L. A. HARKER.

The scholar sat in his study before his writing table, but he did not write. He leaned his elbow on the table and his head on his hand, and he was thinking of Phyllis far away in the mountains with her husband. The table was piled with books—several stood open invitingly—and a fair white sheet of paper lay on his blotting-pad—but he did not write.

Presently the maid opened the door and said:

"There's a young woman, sir, asking to see you; shall I say you're engaged?"

"A young woman?" queried the scholar. "What sort of a young woman?"

"Well, sir," and the maid closed the door behind her. "She says she's from the circus tent that's pitched on the lot behind the school house."

"From the circus?" repeated the scholar. "What can she want?"

"She won't give her name or message, sir. Shall I say that you're engaged, sir?"

The maid considered it the "height of impudence" that a hussy from the circus should dare to ask to see her master. Fine doings, indeed, for such as she to be asking for gentlemen, as bold as brass!

The scholar pondered, then he said, half to himself, "Phyllis would like me to see her—she was always kind. You can show her in."

The maid departed, and presently ushered a young woman into the room and shut the door after her carefully. The young woman advanced into the middle of the room and then stood still awkwardly, and said nothing. She was a tall, slight girl, attired in a variety of garments, startling in hue, and having apparently no connection with one another. Her hair was crowned by a hat of portentous size, adorned by several rather dejected-looking feathers. But under the furze-bush of hair the face was oval and almost beautiful in its regularity of features and pure color.

The scholar rose and bowed, then with old-world courtesy he set a chair for her, and having seen her seated, murmured something shyly as "to what he was indebted for the pleasure of this visit?"

The girl stared at him with wide blue eyes, then said abruptly: "I say, you're a knowin' old cove, aren't you?"

The scholar stared a little at this description of himself, and waved his hands deprecatingly. The girl went on: "I've heard in the town as you are always a-studyin' old books, and knows all sorts of heathenish lingo; now do you know how to make a love poshin'?"

The scholar gazed at her in speechless astonishment, then he grasped the edge of his writing table for support and stammered:

"Do I understand you to ask me if I know anything about love philtres?"

"Yes, that's the ticket," said the girl, gently. "I want a love poshin' to give my young man. He's been and took up with Mad'selle Leonore, what does the trials of strength, and I want to bring him back to me. I was sure as you'd know."

The scholar felt quite sorry for her when he realized the disappointment he was about to inflict, she smiled so prettily and looked so pleasant. He shook his head, then he said gently:

"I'm afraid I am quite unable to help you in this matter. I know nothing of such things, neither do I believe that they can have the smallest effect."

"But I thought you was always a-studyin' ancient days," said the girl, in an argumentative voice, leaning forward in her chair. "Do think—in some of those old books" (waving her hand in the direction of the book-lined walls). "Ain't there something in some of them old books?"

"I fear not," said the scholar almost sadly, she was so eager, so much in earnest. The girl drew herself up in her chair and said abruptly: "I'm a honest girl, I am."

"That I am sure you are, and therefore you need no love philtres. Believe me, you are quite pretty and good enough to inspire love, an honest love, without resource to magic." The scholar spoke persuasively, his voice was very gentle and his manner courtly.

The girl winked her wide blue eyes, and made a little swallowing motion with her throat, then she coughed and continued: "My father's brought us up strict. He don't allow swearing for women; and if we was light he'd lay the horse whip about our shoulders, he would. He's clown in our show, he is."

There was silence for a minute in the big library, then the scholar said gently: "Why do you want a love philtre? Is the man you are engaged to a fickle?"

"Well, he runs after Mad'selle Leonore, and I can't stand it, and he laughs at me, and I'm miserable, I am."

The girl's voice broke, and great tears rolled down her cheeks. She wiped her eyes with a gayly-bordered pocket handkerchief and said: "What would a lady do?"

The scholar pondered for a moment then said, diffidently, and with extreme shyness:

"I think that she would not—show that she minded. That she would try to be always sweet-tempered and gracious, above all to Madam what's-her-name. Don't let him think himself so precious, my child; we all value what is hard to obtain. He's too sure of you, or he wouldn't tease you. If you are wise, and if he is worth having—if he's worthy of you and of your good father, you'll find that all this nonsense will come to an end as a tale that is told."

It was a long speech for the scholar to make; he flushed a little as he made it, and the circus girl gazed at him admiringly, exclaiming, "You are a knowin' old cove!"

The scholar shook his head and said humbly, "I fear I am ignorant in these matters. I have only known three women intimately in my life—my mother, my wife and my daughter."

"Is that what your daughter did?" she asked, eagerly.

"I don't know what she did," answered the scholar gently; and indeed it was true, for the engagement had come to him as a bolt from the blue while he was thinking of Phyllis as still in pinafores.

"Was she very hard to please?" persisted the girl.

"Had Phyllis been hard to please?" the scholar asked himself. He did not know. It had not taken long to please her, anyhow; so he said, "I don't know if she was hard to please, but I know that whatever she did was right and womanly, and you can do all that yourself, my dear."

"I wish I was a lady!" sighed the circus girl, "but father says one can be as good a girl in a troupe as if one was a scripture reader. What do you say?"

"I quite agree with your father; he must be a most sensible man, and I wish I knew him. Believe me, a circus lady can be just as good and useful a lady as any other if she will only try, and I am sure you'll try."

The girl rose from her seat, so did the scholar; she held out her hand and he took it, and the old man and the girl looked into each other's eyes.

"Good-by," said the girl; "I'm glad I come, though you are so ignorant about love poshins'!"

"I'm very glad you came," said the scholar heartily; "and, believe me, you need no 'love poshins,' you are quite charming enough without." The girl flushed up to the roots of the furze-bush.

Then the scholar said: "Would you like some roses?" The girl said "Please sir," in the shyest, smallest voice, and the scholar held the door open for her to pass out. Then he followed her across the hall and through the open front door. He took his pruning knife from his pocket and he cut her a great bunch of roses that were famed throughout the county, then he walked down the drive with her, and at the gate he bade her good-by.

She started down the road, and then, looking back and seeing him still standing at the gate, she ran back, saying breathlessly, "I wish you'd come and see me ride. I can jump through the hoops beautiful, I can! I should like to show you."

The scholar's eyes were very kind, but he shook his head, saying: "I'm getting an old man, my dear; I hardly ever go out at night."

"But there's a matinee—an afternoon show," she explained, "this afternoon." The scholar waved, then the beseeching blue eyes caught his and held them. "Phyllis would like me to," he murmured; then "I will come and see you ride this afternoon."

"I shall look out for you, mind," said the girl; "don't you forget!"

The scholar did not forget—he went! (Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowler.)

Joked With the Bureau

Second Expense Account of Special Examiner Showed He Had a Sense of Humor.

Ex-Commissioner of Pensions Ware told an amusing story of the expense accounts of a special examiner of the bureau, in the American Spectator. The first account, when examined at the end of the month, was found to contain the item: "Porter, 50 cents." The auditing office promptly notified the examiner that the government did not pay for the malt refreshments of its servants; whereupon the examiner patiently explained that the 50 cents had been given to the porter on a train for helping with his baggage. He was then informed that the item would be allowed, but that in future in similar cases he would use the form "portage."

When the account for the following month was received the auditor was astonished to find a charge of two dollars for "cabbage."

"He must be running a boarding house or a rabbit farm," was the of ficer's comment.

It was only after another exchange of letters that it developed that it had been for local transportation, and not for vegetables, that the expenditure had been made.

Little Crackers.

Falling in love generally results in Willie keeping his ears clean, anyhow.

Some writers sell all the good stories they write and still don't make a cent.

Why the knocking remark that "Beauty is only skin deep"? The average woman never loses her skin.

The girl who has no heart in her work frequently has given it away to a man who has promised to work for her.

HIS ONE WEAK SPOT.

Prominent Minnesota Merchant Cured to Stay Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.

O. C. Hayden, of O. C. Hayden & Co., dry goods merchants, of Albert Lea, Minn., says: "I was so lame that I could hardly walk. There was an unaccountable weakness of the back, and constant pain and aching. I could find no rest and was very uncomfortable at night. As my health was good in every other way, I could not understand this trouble. It was just as if all the strength had gone from my back. After suffering for some time I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The remedy acted at once upon the kidneys, and when normal action was restored, the trouble with my back disappeared. I have not had any return of it."

THE CAMERA FIEND.

Man Was Not Satisfied with Ordinary Amusement Like Taking Pictures.

A well-known criminal lawyer one day sauntered into a police court just as a case was called. It appeared that the defendant had no attorney, and the judge glanced about the room to see whom he might assign to the case. "I'll take it, judge," the late comer said, wishing to pass away the time. "By the way, what is the man charged with?" the attorney presently asked.

"He's a camera fiend of the worst sort, Mr. Brown," the judge said with a slight smile. "I expect to send him to the workhouse for about three months."

"What?" the lawyer shouted, indignantly. "Your honor must be joking. Send a man to the rock pile for three months for a little harmless amusement like taking pictures?"

"Well," the judge said, mildly, "he don't take pictures much—it's the cameras he takes."

English Language in Antwerp.

Nearly one half of the shipping traffic to and from Antwerp is carried on under the British and American flags, and this has made Antwerp almost an English-speaking port. Free night schools for exclusive classes in English, organized by the city authorities, are attended by thousands of pupils, while special attention is paid to the study of English in all the grades of the day schools, public as well as private. This desire to popularize the English language is not confined to Belgium, but has extended to Germany as well, where schools of instruction have already been established at Munich and Nuremberg by the German government.

It isn't until a man swears off that he finds out how many fellows want to treat him.

DIDN'T BELIEVE

That Coffee Was the Real Trouble.

Some people flounder around and take everything that's recommended but finally find that coffee is the real cause of their troubles. An Oregon man says:

"For 25 years I was troubled with my stomach. I was a steady coffee drinker, but didn't suspect that as the cause. I took almost anything which someone else had been cured with but to no good. I was very bad last summer and could not work at times."

"On Dec. 2, 1902, I was taken so bad the doctor said I could not live over 24 hours at the most, and I made all preparations to die. I could hardly eat anything, everything distressed me, and I was weak and sick all over. When in that condition coffee was abandoned and I was put on Postum, the change in my feelings came quickly after the drink that was poisoning me was removed."

"The pain and sickness fell away from me and I began to get well day by day, so I stuck to it until now I am well and strong again, can eat heartily, with no headache, heart trouble or the awful sickness of the old coffee days. I drink all I wish of Postum without any harm and enjoy it immensely."

"This seems like a strong story, but I would refer you to the First Nat'l Bank, the Trust Banking Company, or any merchant of Grant's Pass, Ore., in regard to my standing, and I will send a sworn statement of this if you wish. You can also use my name." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Still there are many who persistently fool themselves by saying "Coffee don't hurt me." A ten days' trial of Postum in its place will tell the truth and many times save life. "There's a reason."

ABOUT PRESSING FLOWERS

Pressed Flowers Are Pleasant Souvenirs of a Vacation—How They May Be Preserved.

No prettier or more pleasure-giving vacation spent at the seashore or in the country could be found than a specimen book filled with dried flowers, leaves and seaweeds, and the work of gathering and preparing them would amuse the most indifferent boy or girl. Then it is very simple, and costs little time and trouble.

The collector should provide himself with a tin botanical box, or, lacking this, with several dozen sheets of soft, thick, unglazed wrapping paper, and two boards for covers. The paper and the boards should be several inches larger than the book in which the specimens are to be preserved, advises the Chicago Inter Ocean.

As each specimen is gathered, place it between two sheets of the paper, being careful to make it lie in a natural position. When the collector reaches home, he should transfer the specimens to fresh sheets of paper, placing several sheets between them, and when they are thus placed, one on top of the other, they should be weighted down with anything convenient, say books, or heavy boards, or even stones.

They should remain thus weighted for from 24 to 48 hours, and should then be removed to fresh sheets of paper, and be packed and weighted down as at first, allowing them to stay so for another period of from 24 to 48 hours. The paper used in the first packing may be dried and used again.

When the specimens are taken from the second packing, they should be mounted or fastened on separate sheets of paper for preservation. There are several ways of doing this. One way is to gum down the whole flower or leaf, but a better way is to fasten it in place by putting narrow bands of paper over parts of it. By the last method it is possible, if desired, to remove the specimen to a fresh sheet of paper.

The specimens may be mounted in a scrapbook, or the separate sheets may be kept in a box of proper size; if the latter, a light weight should be kept on them. A bit of camphor in the box will preserve the specimens, but better still is to open and examine them now and then, so that they may get air. No specimen should be put away until it is perfectly dry, or it will mold.

On each sheet containing a specimen should be written the name of the flower or leaf, with the place where it was obtained, and the date.

SIMPLE SUMMER DESSERTS

Sponge Cake Light as Air, a Good Pudding, Snow Ball Trifles, Toothsome Brown Joe Bread.

SPONGE CAKE WITH HOT WATER.—Yolks of five eggs, two cups of powdered sugar, well beaten together, next three quarters of a cup of boiling water, two cupful of flour, a pinch of salt, two heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder and flavoring to taste. Beat the whites of the eggs to a froth. The cake is best cut with a fork.

PEGGOTTY'S PUDDING.—Four ounces of flour, four ounces of suet, rind and juice of lemon, tablespoonful of treacle, one ounce of candied peel, one teaspoonful milk. Boil three and a quarter hours, sifted sugar to be strewn over before serving.

SNOW BALLS.—One cup of sugar, two eggs, four tablespoonfuls sweet milk, one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, flour sufficient to work into balls. Fry in lard, and when done dip in white of egg, then in powdered sugar until white.

BROWN JOE BREAD.—Two cupfuls of corn meal, two cupfuls of white flour, one cupful of molasses, one cupful of sour milk, one teaspoonful soda. Steam three or four hours and bake half an hour.—N. Y. World.

Chicken Salad.

Four pounds chicken will make salad for ten or 12 persons.

Cut the light and dark meat into fine pieces. Use two-thirds of the chicken to one-third of celery. Mix the salad with the dressing, saving some to pour over the top before using.

Salad Dressing.—One tablespoon mustard, one tablespoon sugar, a teaspoon of salt, one cup milk, one of vinegar, three eggs. Mix sugar, salt and mustard together and add the vinegar and well beaten eggs. Pour the milk in, stirring slowly all the time. Set in a dish of cold water and cook as soft custard; add a piece of butter as large as an egg and stir in thoroughly.

A Dinner Party.

Everything should be in readiness sometime before dinner is actually announced, so that the maid can go round and see that nothing is forgotten. A thing to impress strongly on servants is the necessity for giving all plate and glass a final polish before putting it on the table, as nothing looks worse than plate or glass which is finger-marked or not perfectly cleaned. Attention to these little points is the mark of a well-trained servant and a good mistress.

A Summer Drink.

Owing to its acidity, buttermilk is of laxative property and is supposed to make general impression on the liver. It can often be taken by those unable to take fresh cow's milk and has been found valuable in the treatment of diabetes, gastric ulcer and cancer of the stomach. It is said to be one of the most digestible of milk products and is recommended to serve the double purpose of food and beverage.

SUNDAY SERVICES IN THE OLIVER REVIVAL

The rain came just as the crowd was assembling at the tabernacle yesterday for the morning service. On account of this the congregation repaired to the Baptist church. The house was well filled and a most delightful service was had.

Mr. Oliver's subject was "The Shadow Life." "By shadow, I mean influence," said Mr. Oliver. He asked the Christians how their shadows were affecting the sinners about them. He urged the Christian to live a life that would be an influence for good to the ungodly. Your influence will meet you on the day of judgment. "What will business men think when they meet young men on the day of judgment who have been influenced by their acts? I would that your shadow stood for personal piety. All men have influence. Time is going to prove that a life spent in sin is not only a squandered life, but one spent in open rebellion against God."

He urged that Christians be more consistent in their lives. He deplored that the average attendance at prayer meetings was a disgrace to church people. "You have let lodges and clubs come between you and your duty to God. The closer to God you get, the less you need these."

Mr. Oliver dwelt at length on power of thought over life. "Thought not only affects your life, but those about you. The science of telepathy is no longer a theory. If a man lives in a low atmosphere, his thoughts become low and vile." He said there was great power in unity of thought, whether for good or evil. "Thoughts will condemn or commend our souls to the God above."

The Afternoon Service.

A great crowd heard Bro. Oliver at the afternoon meeting for men. His subject was the story of the prodigal son, and the opinion is unanimous that this lecture was one of the most beneficial and elevating ever heard in the city. He demanded that fathers and sons be as chaste and moral as the wives and daughters. He said that the man who was reveling in drink, spending nights in gambling halls and damning his soul and body in adulterous living was doing nothing more than feeding swine. He urged that it was high time for men to quit serving the devil and to respond to a pleading and beckoning God, who has a salvation that will save the vilest sinner.

Evening Service.

"They Shall Never See Light." This was the subject on which Rev. Oliver based his masterful sermon.

Sunday evening.

"The text means that men are doomed to eternal despair." Mr. Oliver said that the unpardonable sin was in entering into a compact with the devil against God; the deliberate rebellion against God. He said: "Some of you are hearing the word the last time. Some of you are hiding behind a refuge of sin and serving the devil." He said men were selling their souls—for money, some for political patronage, others for satisfaction of the lust of the body. "The light shows a man up. A criminal hates the light. Some men won't come to these services because they can't face the light of the truth. Light on the conduct of the insurance companies sent one of the presidents to his grave. Light in the face of the guilty condemns. Many men shun the truth. They refuse to study the word, and rebel against its teachings."

Mr. Oliver attacked the idea that living up to lodge vows would save a man. "There is not a lodge on earth that will justify man on the judgment day." He gave testimony of a Master Mason who declared that there is nothing in Masonry that would justify a man before God. "It will not take the place of the blood of Jesus Christ."

Bro. Oliver said we hear of heathens in China and other foreign lands, but we also have them in our very midst. "There are men who put the dollar above their God; there are women who let dress and society damn their souls." He said thousands worship pleasure instead of God.

Mr. Oliver paid a most eloquent tribute to love. He said the word was all the sweeter because of its long and interesting history. He asked who would condemn the word and its meaning because of its antiquity. "No one. Yet some say I preach on old theology. I want no better recommendation. I love it because it is old. It has stood the test of centuries." He said time is the best critic; that he believed in and loved a theology that has thrived since time began.

Mr. Oliver closed his sermon in earnest appeal to the ungodly to face about and not rebel longer against the spirit of God. He said that it was not the lack of knowledge that would send them to hell. "I have warned you; will you listen?"

300 IMMIGRANTS PERISH IN WRECK OF STEAMER

Cartagena, Spain, Aug. 6.—A terrible marine disaster occurred Saturday evening off Cape Palos. The Italian steamship Sirio, from Genoa for Barcelona, Cadiz, Montevideo and Buenos Ayres, with about 300 persons on board, was wrecked off Hormigas Island.

Three hundred emigrants, most of them Italians and Spaniards, were drowned.

The captain of the steamer committed suicide.

The Bishop of San Pedro, Brazil, also was lost, and it is said that another bishop is among the missing.

The remainder of the passengers and officers and crew got away in the ship's boats, or were rescued by means of boats sent to them from the shore.

A number of fishermen, who made attempts at rescue, were drowned. Those rescued from the vessel are now at Cape Palos in a pitiable condition, being without food or clothing.

The Sirio struck a rocky reef known as Rajost Hormigas, and sank soon after. Hormigas Island lies about two and a half miles to the eastward of Cape Palos.

The Sirio was owned by the Navigazione Italiana, of Genoa. Before he committed suicide the captain declared the steamer had 645 passengers on board, and that her crew numbered 127 men. The Sirio had 570 passengers when leaving Genoa, but additional Spanish passengers were taken on board at Barcelona, where the vessel touched a few hours before the disaster.

OKLAHOMA'S ANTI-TRUST LAW IS A STRINGENT ONE

Guthrie, Okla., Aug. 6.—The announcement from the governor's office that the attorney general has been instructed to "investigate to see if any railroads have violated their charters" has been accepted by the McGuire-Frantz papers with a whoop and a hurrah in an attempt to show what is going to be done by their leaders in fighting the combines and especially the railroads.

The announcement that Governor Frank Frantz will have Attorney General Cromwell investigate violations of Oklahoma laws by railroads reveals a fact not even well known in Oklahoma, that the territory's anti compact law is one of the most stringent on any state statute in the United States, and that if enforced, it would wipe out every combine of any nature in the Indian Territory.

It took effect on December 25, 1890, and its provisions are so stringent that several legislatures, sitting since that time, have acknowledged that it is a better law and more stringent than any proposed since that time. The legislature of 1903 had under discussion what was believed to be a very strict anti-trust law, but all attempts to pass it died when the law of 1890 was unearthed and read by one of the members. It proved to be far more stringent than the one under discussion.

The only question as to this law applying to the railroads, is whether or not freight rates constitute a commodity. If they do constitute a commodity, then a railway company may be punished under its provisions on the matter of freight rates, pooling and other matters of discrimination. The 1890 law provides penalty for combining to restrict competition in business, holds companies liable for violations by their officers, provides that money paid by innocent parties to companies violating the law may be recovered, and places the responsibility upon county attorneys to prosecute violations. The penalty for the first violation is a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $500, and for the second offence a fine of double the amounts for the first offence and also the forfeiture of its corporate rights.

ARRESTED FOR PRIESTER KILLING

Three Negroes Arrested for Murdering the Priest Boy.

Tulsa, I. T., Aug. 6.—Philip Howe, Joe Murray and Jim Jackson, young negroes, were arrested here Saturday afternoon for the murder of little Harry Priester, which occurred in West Tulsa several weeks ago.

The murder of Harry Priester, who was but 8 years of age, was one of the most brutal crimes ever recorded in the territory. He was lured from his home to a remote spot in the West Tulsa Frisco yards and killed, after which his body was mutilated almost beyond recognition and then thrown into a car of wheat in transit to Houston, Texas, to conceal the crime. The murder came to light four days after in Francis, I. T., while the car was lying in the Frisco yards.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

Salaries of State Officials.

During this session of congress, as in many previous sessions, the expediency has been considered of raising the salaries of the higher officers of the national government and of the diplomatic and consular service. It is coming more and more to be recognized as a fact, says Youth's Companion, that the richest nation in the world, occupying a country in which the highest business salaries in the world are cheerfully paid, is nevertheless a miserably poor nation in the matter of salaries for its highest officers. For a large share, indeed for most, of the minor positions in the government service the payment is adequate. The earnings of the clerks in Washington and of most of the men on the civil service lists compare favorably with those of men doing similar work for private employers. But for the president, vice president, members of the cabinet and of the supreme court, the circuit court judges, ambassadors and ministers, and many of the higher officers at Washington and in the states the compensation is not only inadequate to the demands of the places they occupy, but is notoriously less than men of equal ability receive in private life. The word "compensation" is used advisedly, for it includes not only the salary which goes with these offices, but the honor which attaches to them. Both together are still inadequate payment. The desire to preserve that "republican simplicity" which has always been an American ideal is the main obstacle to the raising of official salaries. Many persons fail to consider that for one who can afford it, liberal expenditure is not necessarily a sign either of extravagance or of luxury; and that with nations, as with individuals, the scale which is just and proper in the day of small things may be a measure of unseemly parsimony when the circumstances have changed.

One Theory of Wealth.

Why there should be hard-working poor men and idle rich men in the same community is a question which no one has answered, and no one can answer satisfactorily. That is why the opinion is so prevalent that the world, economically considered, is so very much out of joint, believes T. N. Carter, a writer in Atlantic. But although there is so much unanimity in the opinion that wealth ought not to be distributed as it now is, there is still a wide diversity of opinion, where there is any definite opinion at all, as to how it really ought to be distributed. These opinions may, however, be reduced to three fundamentally distinct theories, which I shall call the aristocratic, the socialistic, and the democratic, or liberalistic, theories. The aristocratic theory is that the good things of the world belong more particularly to certain groups or classes than to others, by virtue of some circumstance connected with their birth or heredity, and independently of their individual achievements. The socialistic theory is that wealth ought to be distributed according to needs, or according to some similar plan arranged beforehand, and independently of the individual ability to acquire wealth in the rough-and-ready struggle of life. The democratic, or liberalistic, theory is that wealth ought to be distributed according to productivity, usefulness, or worth.

Latest Table Delicacy.

"Hothouse lamb" is beginning to appear on the menus at many of the first-class hotels. A quarter of hothouse lamb can now be bought, if one is willing to pay four or five dollars for it. But up to a week or so ago the butchers refused to divide the carcasses, finding ready market for all they could get at from $25 to $30 apiece. As such a lamb seldom weighs more than 25 pounds, including pelt and head, it makes the meat come pretty high. "Hothouse lamb is an answer to a demand for a new kind of edible animal," said a butcher, "but its invention was almost an accident. A farmer out in Kansas conceived the idea that an animal could be pushed in its growth the same as a plant or flower, so he took ten ewes and put them in the cellar of a stable, keeping the place at a uniformly high temperature. When the lambs were born he increased the heat and fed them all they could possibly eat. The lambs developed rapidly and were ready for market six weeks ahead of those born and reared under ordinary conditions."

William Sherring, the young Canadian who won the Marathon race at Athens, gives the credit to his mother, who, he says, supervised his training. She decided what he should eat, and would not cook anything else. When she was told that he had won, she remarked, "Of course, I knew he would. That is what I sent him over for." This is a very pretty sentiment, remarks Youth's Companion, but leaves one in doubt as to what the other young men's mothers said when told that they had not won.

DESCRIBE YOUR WIFE

The Average Man Can't Tell Her Weight, Features, Etc.

"Say, Mr. Married Man," said a Coates house hotel clerk to an acquaintance, "I'll make a little bet with you. You've been a victim of matrimony for five years, but I'll wager a good cigar that you can't, off hand, tell your wife's height, weight and the color of her eyes and hair. Quick now—without stopping to think—is it a go?"

"Sure," replied the married man, "I'll smoke on you."

"All right go ahead with the description. But be careful—I am acquainted with her. What does she weigh?"

"A hundred and thirty-three. That's easy—we both got weighed a few days ago."

"Very good. What's the color of her hair?"

"Why black; that is, pretty near black—a sort of brownish black, with a kind of a reddish tinge."

"Get out that doesn't go. Reddish-blackish-brown doesn't mean anything. How tall is she?"

"Well, the top of her head comes to my chin, and I am five feet eleven

Baseball B. C.

A baseball editor with religious tendencies originates the following: "The devil was the first coacher. He coached Eve when she stole first. Adam stole second. When Isaac met Rebecca at the well she was walking with a pitcher. Sampson struck out a good many times when he beat the Philistines. Cain made a base hit when he slew Able. Moses made his first run when he slew the Egyptians. David was a long-distance thrower, and Moses shut out the Egyptians at the Red Sea. The game was called by the flood on account of wet grounds."

Missions in the Orient

Protestant missionaries among the Filipinos report favorable progress in religious instruction among the natives, and this is confirmed by the recent annual report of the work of the American Bible society in those islands. It sets forth that the commercial, social and religious life of the people there is receiving new and powerful influences from the missionary work and Bible distribution going on, the last year having been the most prosperous in these respects since our occupation there began.

THE DOUMA'S ADVICE

Chicago Tribune Touches on Conditions in Disturbed Russia

It may have been impolitic or "a gross blunder" for the British prime minister to say "The douma is dead! Long live the douma!" It may displease the Russian government, but there is no reason why it should. One douma is dead by the act of the czar. At the same moment that he dissolved the one he gave orders for the election of another. Russia is not to be deprived of the vestige of parliamentary institutions it has had for a few months. Naturally that is gratifying to all who wish well to Russia, and hope that Russians will finally have a constitutional government.

It is to be feared that before they do much blood will flow. St. Petersburg is quiet for the moment, for the streets swarm with soldiers, but there are riots in other cities, and the terrorists are proclaiming more death sentences. The czar is among the doomed. The douma has not died without uttering a protest and an appeal. It does not go so far as to refuse to submit to dissolution. It does not say that it is the government and ask the people to rally to its support.

MORRILL HALL, A. & M. COLLEGE, STILLWATER

The graduates of this institution are meeting with remarkable success. As scientists, engineers, lawyers, physicians, bankers, managers of large agricultural enterprises, business men, etc., they are achieving success which should give pride to every citizen of Oklahoma.

The A. & M. College can no longer be called a small institution. It enrolled last year over two hundred regular students, and counting the short course students, over nine hundred. It has a faculty of thirty members, a building equipped with $200,000 and a teaching equipment of $100,000. Regular college courses, leading to the degree of bachelor of science, are offered as follows:

1. General Science Course. This is a general collegiate course, with the opportunity to specialize in a given science—chemistry, biology, or botany.

2. Engineering Course. A strong and up-to-date course in mechanical, electrical or civil engineering.

3. Agricultural Course, including agronomy, animal husbandry, horticulture, and dairying.

4. Science and Literary Course. This is a new course arranged with the purpose of giving a general collegiate education and a suitable preparation for taking up the professional study of law, business, medicine, etc. For young women it affords an admirable course in domestic economy, preparing them for teaching in that line.

Besides these regular collegiate courses there is a two years' course of twenty weeks each, beginning October 15, in agriculture, mechanics and the common law; also, a ten weeks' course for farm boys, beginning January 5 and a business course, running through the year.

Graduates of the common schools or of the eighth grade are admitted to the sophomore class, without examination. Students completing the tenth grade are admitted to the freshman class, and graduates of approved high schools are admitted to the sophomore class.

The fall term opens on September 11. Write to the President or Registrar, Stillwater, Oklahoma, for a catalogue.

CHANCE MADE HIM

Professor Milne, the Famous Seismologist, Owes to it Success

Had it not been for chance Professor Milne the famous seismologist, might never have taken up the study of earthquakes at all. He was 20 years of age when Cyrus W. Field, the founder of the Atlantic Cable company, sent to the Royal School of Mines, London, for a young man to go out to Japan. The present professor was the man selected. "When can you start?" on "Tuesday," asked Field. The student responded that the time was too short to get his things together, as it was then Friday. "Look here, young man," said Field, "it only took six days to make the world, and if a whole world can be made in that time your few things can be got together in less. Leave a note with my secretary as you go out as to what salary you want." On the Tuesday the young man was on his way to Japan.

The Kaiser's Daughter

Princess Victoria, the Kaiser's only daughter, is now a well grown girl. She is tall for her age and uncommonly plump, but what she lacks in beauty is made good in sprightliness. For one thing, she stands in no awe of her size and puts etiquette to flight when any whim seizes her.

THE LAZY WORM

Large District in Middle of Porto Rico Afflicted With it

A large district in the middle of Porto Rico, with a population of 100,000, is afflicted with the "lazy worm," and official efforts are being made to improve the inhabitants' condition. A hospital has been established at Albonito, with an endowment of $15,000, and will do what it can to check the ravages of this minute reptile, of the existence of which the old time natives of Porto Rico never had the slightest notion. Last year an American medical officer, Captain Ashford, treated 4,500 cases, and nearly all of them were cured. As a result, the population was aroused to much enthusiasm, and the afflicted are applying in great numbers for treatment. Hereafter the malady has been deemed incurable.

Indian Territory towns have lost sight of politics in their aspirations to become county seats. Their delegations are consuming much of the time of the district committee.

Doctor Phaker—"Take this prescription; it will either kill or cure." Patient—"But suppose it kills me?" Doctor Phaker—"Nothing ventured, nothing gained. My motto is, 'No cure, no pay.' So I'm taking a chance as well as you."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Elihu Root, secretary of war, used to be a golf player. He was one of the founders of the Nassau club. He quit playing golf when he went to Washington and began riding horseback. The president says golf is a "grandmother's game."

That would be open proclamation of a revolution. It would be a challenge to the authorities to throw into prison all who had anything to do with such a manifesto. The douma says to the people, "You are the government." This may become true, but it is not true now in fact or in theory.

The advice which the douma gives to the ineffectual, unorganized, and mostly uneducated mass it calls the government is to pay no taxes and not to give a soldier to the army. If the government were to permit such a program to be lived up to it would be starved out. It cannot live without taxes and soldiers. If the advice of the douma, or, rather, of its radical and labor members, shall be followed the government will resort to force to collect its dues. There will be strife and bloodshed unless the army shall refuse to go on with the sanguinary and odious work it has been engaged in. As has been said again and again during the last two years, everything depends on the army. When it ceases to obey orders, and not until then, will there be a new government.

The czar and the douma between them have given Russian credit a hard blow. Government and industrial securities have tumbled in price and foreign holders are nervous. Nor are American financiers wholly unconcerned. If the Russian government should be bankrupted by a refusal to pay taxes or if it should have to fight for its life against rebellious people there would be panics in Berlin and Paris, whose effects would be felt immediately in the money markets of this country. The advice of the douma to the people of Russia may in time spell ruin to some Wall Street speculator. —Chicago Tribune.

Good and Loud.

Speaking of meat scandals and stockyards aroma, "Colonel" Davis the Chicago artist, says the city abattoirs are not in it for smell with the little slaughter house he remembers to have existed back home when he was a boy.

"It was certainly a loud one," said the colonel sparring a piece of finnan-haddie with his fork. "It smelled to heaven! Why, talk about investigating it! You couldn't get near enough to see it, let alone investigating. That slaughter house was sure exempt from the muck rakers."

The Girl From the Circus.

BY L. A. HARKER.

The scholar sat in his study before his writing table, but he did not write. He leaned his elbow on the table and his head on his hand, and he was thinking of Phyllis far away in the mountains with her husband. The table was piled with books—several stood open invitingly—and a fair white sheet of paper lay on his blotting-pad—but he did not write.

Presently the maid opened the door and said:

"There's a young woman, sir, asking to see you; shall I say you're engaged?"

"A young woman?" queried the scholar. "What sort of a young woman?"

"Well, sir," and the maid closed the door behind her. "She says she's from the circus tent that's pitched on the lot behind the school house."

"From the circus?" repeated the scholar. "What can she want?"

"She won't give her name or message, sir. Shall I say that you're engaged, sir?"

The maid considered it the "height of impudence" that a hussy from the circus should dare to ask to see her master. Fine doings, indeed, for such as she to be asking for gentlemen, as bold as brass!

The scholar pondered, then he said, half to himself, "Phyllis would like me to see her—she was always kind. You can show her in."

The maid departed, and presently ushered a young woman into the room and shut the door after her carefully.

The young woman advanced into the middle of the room and then stood still awkwardly, and said nothing. She was a tall, slight girl, attired in a variety of garments, starting in hue, and having apparently no connection with one another. Her hair was crowned by a hat of portentous size, adorned by several rather dejected looking feathers. But under the furze-bush of hair the face was oval and almost beautiful in its regularity of features and pure color.

The scholar rose and bowed, then with old-world courtesy he set a chair for her, and having seen her seated, murmured something shyly as "to what I was indebted for the pleasure of this visit?"

The girl stared at him with wide blue eyes, then said abruptly: "I say, you're a knowin' old cove, aren't you?"

The scholar stared a little at this description of himself, and waved his hands deprecatingly. The girl went on: "I've heard in the town as you are always a-studyin' old books, and knows all sorts of beathenish lingo; now do you know how to make a love poshin?"

The scholar gazed at her in speechless astonishment, then he grasped the edge of his writing table for support and stammered:

"Do I understand you to ask me if I know anything about love philtres?"

"Yes, that's the ticket," said the girl, gently. "I want a love poshin to give my young man. He's been and took up with Mad'selle Leonore, what does the trials of strength, and I want to bring him back to me. I was sure as you'd know."

The scholar felt quite sorry for her when he realized the disappointment he was about to inflict, she smiled so prettily and looked so pleasant. He shook his head, then he said gently: "I'm afraid I am quite unable to help you in this matter. I know nothing of such things, neither do I believe that they can have the smallest effect."

"But I thought you was always a-studyin' ancient days," said the girl, in an argumentative voice, leaning forward in her chair. "Do think—in some of those old books" (waving her hand in the direction of the book-lined walls). "Ain't there something in some of them old books?"

"I fear not," said the scholar almost sadly, she was so eager, so much in earnest. The girl drew herself up in her chair and said abruptly: "I'm a honest girl, I am."

"That I am sure you are, and therefore you need no love philtres. Believe me, you are quite pretty and good enough to inspire love, an honest love, without resource to magic." The scholar spoke persuasively, his voice was very gentle and his manner courtly. The girl winked her wide blue eyes, and made a little swallowing motion with her throat, then she coughed and continued: "My father's brought us up strict. He don't allow swearin' for women; and if we was light he'd lay the horse whip about our shoulders, he would. He's down in our show, he is."

There was silence for a minute in the big library, then the scholar said gently: "Why do you want a love philtre? Is the man you are engaged to fickle?"

"Well, he runs after Mad'selle Leonore, and I can't stand it, and he laughs at me, and I'm miserable, I am."

The girl's voice broke, and great tears rolled down her cheeks. She wiped her eyes with a gayly-bordered pocket handkerchief and said: "What would a lady do?"

The scholar pondered for a moment then said, diffidently, and with extreme shyness:

"I think that she would not—show that she minded. That she would try to be always sweet-tempered and gracious, above all to Madam what's-her-name. Don't let him think himself so precious, my child; we all value what is hard to obtain. He's too sure of you, or he wouldn't tease you. If you are wise, and if he is worth having—if he's worthy of you and of your good father, you'll find that all this nonsense will come to an end as a tale that is told."

It was a long speech for the scholar to make; he flushed a little as he made it, and the circus girl gazed at him admiringly, exclaiming: "You are a knowin' old cove!"

The scholar shook his head and said humbly, "I fear I am ignorant in these matters. I have only known three women intimately in my life—my mother, my wife and my daughter."

"Is that what your daughter did?" she asked, eagerly.

"I don't know what she did," answered the scholar gently; and indeed it was true, for the engagement had come to him as a bolt from the blue while he was thinking of Phyllis as still in pinafores.

"Was she very hard to please?" persisted the girl.

"Had Phyllis been hard to please?" the scholar asked himself. He did not know. It had not taken long to please her, anyhow; so he said, "I don't know if she was hard to please, but I know that whatever she did was right and womanly, and you can do all that yourself, my dear."

"I wish I was a lady!" sighed the circus girl, "but father says one can be as good a girl in a troupe as if one was a scripture reader. What do you say?"

"I quite agree with your father; he must be a most sensible man, and I wish I knew him. Believe me, a circus lady can be just as good and useful a lady as any other if she will only try, and I am sure you'll try."

The girl rose from her seat, so did the scholar; she held out her hand and he took it, and the old man and the girl looked into each other's eyes.

"Good-by," said the girl; "I'm glad I come, though you are so ignorant about love poshins!"

"I'm very glad you came," said the scholar heartily; "and, believe me, you need no 'love poshins,' you are quite charming enough without." The girl flushed up to the roots of the furze-bush.

Then the scholar said: "Would you like some roses?" The girl said "Please sir," in the shyest, smallest voice, and the scholar held the door open for her to pass out. Then he followed her across the hall and through the open front door. He took his pruning knife from his pocket and he cut her a great bunch of roses that were famed throughout the county, then he walked down the drive with her, and at the gate he bade her good-by.

She started down the road, and then, looking back and seeing him still standing at the gate, she ran back, saying breathlessly, "I wish you'd come and see me ride. I can jump through the hoops beautiful, I can! I should like to show you."

The scholar's eyes were very kind, but he shook his head, saying: "I'm getting an old man, my dear; I hardly ever go out at night."

"But there's a matinee—an afternoon show," she explained, "this afternoon."

The scholar wavered, then the beseeching blue eyes caught his and held them. "Phyllis would like me to," he murmured; then "I will come and see you ride this afternoon."

"I shall look out for you, mind," said the girl; "don't you forget!"

The scholar did not forget—he went! (Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowler.)

Joked With the Bureau

Second Expense Account of Special Examiner Showed He Had a Sense of Humor.

Ex-Commissioner of Pensions Ware told an amusing story of the expense accounts of a special examiner of the bureau, in the American Spectator. The first account, when examined at the end of the month, was found to contain the item: "Porter, 50 cents." The auditing office promptly notified the examiner that the government did not pay for the malt refreshments of its servants; whereupon the examiner patiently explained that the 50 cents had been given to the porter on a train for helping with his baggage. He was then informed that the item would be allowed, but that in future in similar cases he would use the form "porterage."

When the account for the following month was received the auditor was astonished to find a charge of two dollars for "cabbage."

"He must be running a boarding house or a rabbit farm," was the of ficer's comment.

It was only after another exchange of letters that it developed that it had been for local transportation, and not for vegetables, that the expenditure had been made.

HIS ONE WEAK SPOT.

Prominent Minnesota Merchant Cured to Stay Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.

O. C. Hayden, of O. C. Hayden & Co., dry goods merchants, of Albert Lea, Minn., says: "I was so lame that I could hardly walk. There was an unaccountable weakness of the back, and constant pain and aching. I could find no rest and was very uncomfortable at night. As my health was good in every other way, I could not understand this trouble. It was just as if all the strength had gone from my back. After suffering for some time I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The remedy acted at once upon the kidneys, and when normal action was restored, the trouble with my back disappeared. I have not had any return of it."

THE CAMERA FIEND.

Man Was Not Satisfied with Ordinary Amusement Like Taking Pictures.

A well-known criminal lawyer one day sauntered into a police court just as a case was called. It appeared that the defendant had no attorney, and the judge glanced about the room to see whom he might assign to the case. "I'll take it, judge," the late comer said, wishing to pass away the time.

"By the way, what is the man charged with?" the attorney presently asked.

"He's a camera fiend of the worst sort, Mr. Brown," the judge said with a slight smile. "I expect to send him to the workhouse for about three months."

"What?" the lawyer shouted, indignantly. "Your honor must be joking. Send a man to the rock pile for three months for a little harmless amusement like taking pictures?"

"Well," the judge said, mildly, "he don't take pictures much—it's the cameras he takes."

English Language in Antwerp. Nearly one half of the shipping traffic to and from Antwerp is carried on under the British and American flags, and this has made Antwerp almost an English-speaking port. Free night schools for exclusive classes in English, organized by the city authorities, are attended by thousands of pupils, while special attention is paid to the study of English in all the grades of the day schools, public as well as private. This desire to popularize the English language is not confined to Belgium, but has extended to Germany as well, where schools of instruction have already been established at Munich and Nuremberg by the German government.

It isn't until a man swears off that he finds out how many fellows want to treat him.

DIDN'T BELIEVE

That Coffee Was the Real Trouble.

Some people flounder around and take everything that's recommended but finally find that coffee is the real cause of their troubles. An Oregon man says:

"For 25 years I was troubled with my stomach. I was a steady coffee drinker, but didn't suspect that as the cause. I took almost anything which someone else had been cured with but to no good. I was very bad last summer and could not work at times."

"On Dec. 2, 1902, I was taken so bad the doctor said I could not live over 24 hours at the most, and I made all preparations to die. I could hardly eat anything, everything distressed me, and I was weak and sick all over. When in that condition coffee was abandoned and I was put on Postum, the change in my feelings came quickly after the drink that was poisoning me was removed."

"The pain and sickness fell away from me and I began to get well day by day, so I stuck to it until now I am well and strong again, can eat heartily, with no headache, heart trouble or the awful sickness of the old coffee days. I drink all I wish of Postum without any harm and enjoy it immensely."

"This seems like a strong story, but I would refer you to the First Nat'l Bank, the Trust Banking Company, or any merchant of Grant's Pass, Ore., in regard to my standing, and I will send a sworn statement of this if you wish. You can also use my name." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Still there are many who persistently fool themselves by saying "Coffee don't hurt me." A ten days' trial of Postum in its place will tell the truth and many times save life. "There's a reason."

ABOUT PRESSING FLOWERS

Pressed Flowers Are Pleasant Souvenirs of a Vacation—How They May Be Preserved.

No prettier or more pleasure-giving vacation spent at the seashore or in the country could be found than a specimen book filled with dried flowers, leaves and seaweeds, and the work of gathering and preparing them would amuse the most indifferent boy or girl. Then it is very simple, and costs little time and trouble.

The collector should provide himself with a tin botanical box, or, lacking this, with several dozen sheets of soft, thick, unglazed wrapping paper, and two boards for covers. The paper and the boards should be several inches larger than the book in which the specimens are to be preserved, advises the Chicago Inter Ocean.

As each specimen is gathered, place it between two sheets of the paper, being careful to make it lie in a natural position. When the collector reaches home, he should transfer the specimens to fresh sheets of paper, placing several sheets between them, and when they are thus placed, one on top of the other, they should be weighted down with anything convenient, say books, or heavy boards, or even stones.

They should remain thus weighted for from 24 to 48 hours, and should then be removed to fresh sheets of paper, and be packed and weighted down as at first, allowing them to stay so for another period of from 24 to 48 hours. The paper used in the first packing may be dried and used again.

When the specimens are taken from the second packing, they should be mounted or fastened on separate sheets of paper for preservation. There are several ways of doing this. One way is to gum down the whole flower or leaf, but a better way is to fasten it in place by putting narrow bands of paper over parts of it. By the last method it is possible, if desired, to remove the specimen to a fresh sheet of paper.

The specimens may be mounted in a scrapbook, or the separate sheets may be kept in a box of proper size; if the latter, a light weight should be kept on them. A bit of camphor in the box will preserve the specimens, but better still is it to open and examine them now and then, so that they may get air. No specimen should be put away until it is perfectly dry, or it will mold.

On each sheet containing a specimen should be written the name of the flower or leaf, with the place where it was obtained, and the date.

SIMPLE SUMMER DESSERTS

Sponge Cake Light as Air, a Good Pudding, Snow Ball Trifles, Toothsome Brown Joe Bread.

SPONGE CAKE WITH HOT WATER.—Yolks of five eggs, two cups of powdered sugar, well beaten together, next three quarters of a cup of boiling water, two cupfuls of flour, a pinch of salt, two heaping teaspoonsful of baking powder and flavoring to taste. Beat the whites of the eggs to a froth. The cake is best cut with a fork.

PEGGOTTY'S PUDDING.—Four ounces of flour, four ounces of suet, rind and juice of lemon, tablespoonful of treacle, one ounce of candied peel, one teaspoonful milk. Boil three and a quarter hours, sifted sugar to be strewn over before serving.

SNOW BALLS.—One cup of sugar, two eggs, four tablespoonfuls sweet milk, one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, flour sufficient to work into balls. Fry in lard, and when done dip in white of egg, then in powdered sugar until white.

BROWN JOE BREAD.—Two cupfuls of corn meal, two cupfuls of white flour, one cupful of molasses, one cupful of sour milk, one teaspoonful soda. Steam three or four hours and bake half an hour.—N. Y. World.

Chicken Salad.

Four pounds chicken, will make salad for ten or 12 persons.

Cut the light and dark meat into fine pieces. Use two thirds of the chicken to one third of celery. Mix the salad with the dressing, saving some to pour over the top before using.

Salad Dressing.—One tablespoon mustard, one tablespoon sugar, a teaspoon of salt, one cup milk, one of vinegar, three eggs. Mix sugar, salt and mustard together and add the vinegar and well beaten eggs. Pour the milk in, stirring slowly all the time. Set in a dish of cold water and cook as soft custard; add a piece of butter as large as an egg and stir in thoroughly.

A Dinner Party.

Everything should be in readiness sometime before dinner is actually announced, so that the maid can go round and see that nothing is forgotten. A thing to impress strongly on servants is the necessity for giving all plate and glass a final polish before putting it on the table, as nothing looks worse than plate or glass which is finger-marked or not perfectly cleaned. Attention to these little points is the mark of a well-trained servant and a good mistress.

A Summer Drink.

Owing to its acidity, buttermilk is of laxative property and is supposed to make general impression on the liver. It can often be taken by those unable to take fresh cow's milk and has been found valuable in the treatment of diabetes, gastric ulcer and cancer of the stomach. It is said to be one of the most digestible of milk products and is recommended to serve the double purpose of food and beverage.

They Should.

"My honest conviction, based upon my own experience and that of my friends, is that 'Hunt's Cure' will cure a larger per cent of skin troubles, especially of an itching variety, than any other remedy. Certainly those afflicted with any form of itch should try it."

J. O. Monroe,
Atchison, Kan.
